A highly experienced therapist who works with court-involved families, and a healthcare attorney who represents and counsels mental health professionals, will discuss the challenges, risks, do's and don'ts for therapists working with high conflict divorce clients. In addition to learning what therapists need to know to be effective and minimize risks, we will hear what lawyers and judges need to know when interfacing with therapists in family law cases. Standard of care, confidentiality, subpoenas, releasing records, testifying, responding to grievances and risk management will be discussed.
