Sorensen/Competency Hearings:

How to Know When It's Needed and
What Happens in the Court After You File

David Littman, JD and Mag. Dina Christiansen

COVID and the associated employment and financial stressors have been hard on many of us. Some people are experiencing worsened mental health or slips into addictive tendencies. What happens when one of the parties is not competent to present their wants and desires to the court, either on their own or through counsel? We will address how to determine whether a Sorensen hearing is needed, how to enlist the assistance of mental health professionals in that determination, what are lawyers' ethical requirements regarding same, and what the court does upon receipt of the motion, needs for mental health professionals to do the Sorensen screening and next steps.
